

Writing a CV

I think most of the advice I got was online.

My parents as well who'd obviously gone through, a lot of job applications and interview processes themselves.

CV has to match the job requirements, that's the first thing I look at.

We are really specific on our job descriptions about what we are looking for.

Important CV tips

Employers enjoy seeing something that's very well presented.

Cleanly written.

The more structured it is the better you are going to stand out.

And also go through and make sure you haven't got any spelling errors or grammatical errors.

It has to be correct.

Grammatically and factually.

And I don't think it's that important how long your CV is.

It's more to do with how relevant the stuff you put in is for the job.

Information to include on your CV

So we expect most recent experience at the top.

Because that's what we are looking for.

What hobbies have they got, what interests have they got.

If they've had work experiences it shows to me that they are eager to work and learn.

How my CV can show my best qualities

You need to make it as easy as possible, for us to differentiate you from all the other applicants.

What makes you perfect for this role?

Why not send a video, why not send a link?

Why not get a really solid linked in profile, where you can bring out your personality a bit more.

They know about grades, but they don't know about the person behind the grades.

They need to see that you're different and you're going to bring something really meaningful to their business.

Thanks to all the employers who took part.

Amber Energy, Principality Building Society, Spindogs Digital Agency, ITV Cymru, Welsh Ambulance Service, LHP Chartered Accountants, and Griffiths Civil Engineering & Construction.